FEED CATTLE FOR RESULTS

Good Cattle Poorly Fed Bring Scant Money Returns At Any Time

ADVICE WORTH RECEIVING

There is Good Money and a World of Enjoyment in Breeding Good Cattle, but Poor Feeding May Spoil It All.

(R. M. Murphy, Specialist in Animal Husbandry Division of Extension, University of Tennessee.)

I have just returned from a hurried inspection trip pretty well covering the beef cattle herds of the state and I am convinced of the absolute necessity of some of our breeders making radical changes in their methods if they ever expect to be worthy of the name of breeder.

If a man buys good cattle and lets them go to pieces under his care there is no hope for him. He hasn't learned the first lesson, i. e., that good feeding is an absolutely inseparable part of the successful raising of purebred cattle. If he hasn't the kind of cattle that will pay for their feed, somebody has loaded him up and the sooner he gets rid of them the better off he will be. The average purebred calf at one year of age will be worth $50.00 to $100.00, without any extra feed. Give him $50.00 worth of feed extra and he will sell for $100.00 to $500.00.

How any breeder can overlook this fact is more than I can understand, and yet 75 per cent of the calves in our herds are underfed, undersized; many of them weighing not much over one-half what they should at a given age.

You all know the type of breeder who begins making apologies for the condition of his cattle before you get in the barn lot. You know right then that you are going to see something that will make you sad. And yet this very fellow thinks it strange when you figure that his calves are worth $100.00 to $150.00, and can't understand why they're not just as much as Mr. So and So's, whose sale averaged $600.00 or $1,000.00. He reads livestock papers; he studies pedigrees; his cattle are well bred; but he has never learned that feed was made for good cattle and that they should be given all they desire.

More and more I suspect that the main trouble lies in the fact that the average owner of purebreds doesn't know how big a calf ought to be at a certain age. Below is a standard of weights for beef cattle and if you are not sure about your calf crop, take this standard out to the barn lot with you and run your calves over the scales.

Age	Weight of Bull	Weight of Cow
6 months	500	450
12 months	925	850
18 months	1,350	1,185
24 months	1,725	1,400
30 months	1,900	1,600
36 months	2,000	1,800

A great many of our good breeders have their young animals gain at the rate of 100 pounds per month until they are 10 months of age, at which time they weigh 1,000 pounds. If you will keep calves up to the above standard, however, it will save you the making of a lot of apologies when your friends and neighbors come to see your cattle and will save you lots of embarrassment when the public sets a value on your calf crop.

There is good money and a world of enjoyment in breeding good cattle, but there's mighty little money and less satisfaction in trying to determine the minimum ration necessary for their mere subsistence.

Try this standard out on your herd.

ABOUT HYDRAULIC RAMS

It is usually not advisable to install a hydraulic ram unless one can get as much as 8 feet of fall from the spring to the ram. The size of pipe used will, of course, depend upon the amount of water that is available for operating the ram. The common sizes of the drive pipe are 1 1/2 and 2 inches with a 3/4-inch delivery pipe. The 2-inch and 2 1/2-inch drive pipe call for a 1-inch delivery pipe. The amount of water required to operate the ram with these different sizes of pipe will probably average as follows: 1 1/2 inch equals about 4 gallons per minute; 1 3/4 inch equals about 8 gallons per minute; 2 inch equals about 13 gallons per minute; 2 1/2 inch equals about 20 gallons per minute.

There are many manufacturers of hydraulic rams.
